The conference will be held on June 23–24, 2007, on the Shirokane campus of Meiji Gakuin University in Tokyo. There is good access to the campus by public transport. The nearest JR (Japan Railway) stations are Shinagawa Station (品川駅) and Meguro Station (目黒駅). A frequent bus service runs to the campus from either Shinagawa or Meguro stations, and takes six minutes in either case. The fare is 200 yen.

Directions from Shinagawa Station

Leave Shinagawa Station by the Takanawa Exit or West Exit.

Cross the road at the traffic lights, and go to the Toei bus stop on your left. You’ll pass the small "Keihin" Hotel and a tiny shrine. The bus stop is marked with a large number 3.

The sign has information in four languages and a yellow advertisement for Meiji Gakuin University with the large initials MG. The bus line itself is number 93 (千93) bound for Meguro Station (目黒駅前行). All the buses from bus stop no. 3 will take you to the conference site, Meiji Gakuin University.

You will hear loudspeaker announcements for each stop. The bus stop before the one for the university is Takanawa Keisatsusho mae (高輪警察署前, Takanawa Police Station). The bus turns then makes a left-hand turn, and stops just past the main gates of the university. The stop is announced over the loudspeaker as Meiji Gakuin mae, and displayed in English and Japanese (明治学院前) on the electronic board above the driver.
It is also possible to walk from Shirokane Station to the campus. This takes about 15 minutes. There is a scenic back route, but the easiest way is to follow the bus route up the hill, passing the Tobu Takanawa Hotel, turning right at the Catholic Church, and then turning left at the old fire tower (see photographs below).

Here are maps labelled in English and Japanese from Meiji Gakuin University’s web site. MG indicates the university campus. The conference will be held in the Main Building (Honkan 本館). Versions of this map in Korean and Chinese are also available from the university site.

Directions from Meguro Station
Turn right as you leave the ticket wicket and leave the station building by the west exit, where you will find a small bus terminal. Look for the stop for buses for "Oi keibajo (大井競馬場) (Oi Race Course). It takes about six minutes to reach the campus. The name of the stop is Meiji Gakuin mae. This is shown in Japanese (明治学院前) and in English on the the electronic board above the driver. You will also hear a loudspeaker announcement.

References:
http://www.meijigakuin.ac.jp/access/shirokane.pdf