Choosing a high school was the hardest decision I have ever made. When I was in junior high school, I did not know which high school to attend. Most of my friends planned to go to the local public school near our neighborhood. We had grown up playing baseball together, and they wanted me to join the local high school team. However, I decided to apply to a private high school, believing it would offer better opportunities for attending top universities. In the end, I was accepted to the private school, but I lost touch with many of my closest friends. I know attending a private school was the best choice for my future, but I sometimes wonder what my life would have been like if I had made a different decision. I often think I might be happier today if I had stayed and played baseball with my friends.
