

Commentaires

Hourrah pour le sensei ! Voilà une prise de position noble et courageuse de la part d'un universitaire japonais ! Que ses pairs le rejoignent !

Rédigé par: Clément | le 23 novembre 2007 à 19:10

Il serait bon d'avoir également une version japonaise de ce texte.

Rédigé par: Thomas | le 24 novembre 2007 à 00:48

C'est curieux, car ce que vous écrivez pourrait parfaitement s'appliquer aux fanatiques des pays nordiques, plus norvégiens que les norvégiens, plus finlandais que les Finlandais et comme la lettre de cette universitaire japonaise me rappelle également le climat de silence et de conformisme qui règne dans nos universités nordiques.

Rédigé par: Protolapon | le 24 novembre 2007 à 01:05

Bonjour,

J'ai écrit un article en japonais dans mon blog pour m'opposer à ce fichage biométrique et j'y ai présenté quelques-uns de vos posts à ce sujet, sans traduction pour l'instant, hélas... Si vous voulez que je traduise vos textes avec votre autorisation, c'est avec plaisir que je le ferai dans mon blog...

<http://muranoserena.blog91.fc2.com/blog-entry-491.html>

Je saurais traduire le texte du professeur Kudo en japonais aussi mais j'espère qu'il le fera lui-même.

Rédigé par: Muranose Rena | le 24 novembre 2007 à 15:19

Je connais bien M.Kudo, et sa réaction alliée à son coup de plume énergique ne me surprennent pas, venant de lui, me confortant même dans l'idée qu'il a conservé intactes sa vitalité et sa capacité à s'opposer à tout ce qui offense l'intelligence. Plusieurs de mes collègues (enseignants japonais) le connaissent et je serai ravie de montrer en exemple son message sans équivoque.

Rédigé par: Janick Magne | le 25 novembre 2007 à 00:10

Merci. Que sa vitalité en inspire d'autres.

Rédigé par: Lionel Dersot | le 25 novembre 2007 à 00:14

Que faudrait-il entreprendre pour faire de cet onirisme récalcitrant un simple vieux souvenir poussiéreux..? Les nouvelles technologies de l'information n'auront quasiment rien changé à l'affaire.

Rédigé par: Pierre-Juan | le 26 novembre 2007 à 12:15

Pierre-Juan, rien sinon que tenir un autre discours et ne pas espérer changer le monde. L'important est de tenter de tenir un autre discours. C'est suffisamment considérable comme tâche.

Rédigé par: Lionel Dersot | le 26 novembre 2007 à 20:32

Kim said...

Thank you sir. It is refreshing to realize that some grasp the issue so well. We live in a world community that's shrinking everyday. Boundaries and borders must come down, not be erected. I fear that the US and now the Japanese example will only polarize peoples against each other, which has historically always been a very bad thing.

November 23, 2007 2:38 PM (c)

vegetablej said...

I also want to say thanks for raising your voice to protest these xenophobic measures by government.

I'm sorry your colleagues, and the Japanese people at large, didn't join you, but it helps to restore my faith that you did. :)

November 24, 2007 1:07 AM (c)

Anonymous said...

You're all a bunch of idiots.

Let me ask you this: Would you let some total stranger just waltz into your own house, your own home? You would do that? You would let some complete stranger just walk right into your house and let him/her do as he/she pleases? You would do that? You would let someone you didn't know just come into your house whether you're there or not and let that person do whatever he/she wanted? You would do that? With no permission, with no prior approval, with no check ups, you would let someone just barge right into your private home, your family's abode, and let that person do whatever he/she wanted? Really? Shoot - I wouldn't ever want to visit your place, man, I wouldn't feel safe nor comfortable knowing that your doors and windows are wide open to the whole world to just come in whenever and do whatever. How would I ever feel comfortable or safe at all in that situation? Use your heads, dummies.

Erich Meatleg said...

hello anonymous.

no one said that we should NOT have protection. thank you for the straw-man argument though. it IS xenophobic because interracial families are expected to go through separate lines even though the foreign members may have been here 10 or 20 years. if it was only targeting tourists, then it wouldn't be so offensive. it is however targeting a very large audience, based upon RACE rather than STATUS. plus, it is also ridiculous because if the government were really serious about preventing crime and terrorism, it would be fingerprinting the Japanese who commit 99.99% of the crime here, and 100% of all of the terror attacks. you, chump, are the idiot here. and you would'nt be welcome in my house anyway.

November 24, 2007 9:49 PM (c)

Kim said...

LOL..... "anonymous"!!!! Thank you for your "anonymous" personal comments!!! To answer your concerns..... no.....I wouldn't let ANY stranger walk into my house or home and do as they please, especially one who doesn't even want to provide their name!!! However I'm not a stranger here. I have already been through stringent checks to ascertain who I am. My wife is Japanese, and my two children are both Japanese and British until they are 18 and must choose. However, now when we travel as a family and come back to our home in Japan, where I have paid taxes for many years, we will be separated by the authorities. I'm sorry if you think that I have no business complaining about that. If you don't want people butting into your house, maybe you shouldn't ask them for part of the rent.....

November 25, 2007 8:20 AM (c)